On a day to day basis we all often wonder what it takes to get to that place where we are content with our progression in our careers. Success is not a place, it's a mindset; this is the one thing we should all understand. Each individual has the potential to set his/her own mark during their life, where they feel fulfilled and accomplished. But where does this fulfilling feelings come from? It's the feeling you get when you achieve the goals that you set out for yourself to achieve.

As we embark on the road called "life" in pursuit of what's left of the American dream, our image of what we perceive to be a successful person often changes. Initially your perception of success is influenced by your family, friends and surrounding environment. As a children we are bombarded with good and bad principles that shape our thinking as we grow into mature teenagers and adults. The effects of how we apply these positive and/or negative influences in our career endeavors may help or harm our position in this industry. We have to carefully plan out our individual approaches to success, because most professionals desire to realize progress in their areas of specialty.

So what is it that makes a truly successful person? What exactly does success look like? Most people look for the superficial representations of elevation. Things we can see, for example, like a house, a car, clothing and money. These are not the indicators of success. Many have access to material possessions, and these things are not the only markers for successful people.

What about a stylist that gave birth to a child with heart disease that needs a heart transplant. Her measure for success would be to actually locate a heart transplant donor for her child.

How about the Aesthetician that is diagnosed with cancer and becomes terminally ill. Success for him might be simply being able to live and having the freedom to do what he enjoys most.

What about the nail technician whose husband left her, has to provide for three kids on her own and loss her home because of the economy. Success for her might be finding a suitable apartment to keep her children safe from harm.

I too have had my own personal bouts with lupus and fibromialgia, which are both very painful diseases. I have been a mother, stylist and an educator. Success for me was making it through the day where I did not have to hurt while performing my daily responsibilities.

It is sad that most people will only view success by the material things that they see. I hopefully one day they too will see the big picture. Life has many different roads to success. And all the roads to success should lead you to one place... PEACE. Which of you know how to truly love oneself? How many of you have truly found fulfillment within your careers. And hopefully you will learn to give back, because someone out there is looking for success just like you.

Things We Can See!
These Are Not The True Measures Of Success.
Sometimes You Have To Look At The Big Picture.

By Mark David Carter

N'Style Hair Grooming Barber & Beauty carves out new niche for barbers interested in taking their entire business to a new plateau. The team at N'Style is truly on to something, because once you peer in the window, your compelled to step inside. One of many barbershops in DC Metro, the nostalgic and elegant grooming parlor could be the next big barber business trend. Something has their clients coming back again and again. Let's explore what all the buzz is about with this authentic barbershop.

They say first impressions are lasting ones. The look of this shop stands in a category of its own. The atmosphere alone will distinctly make any guest or industry professionals look at the barbering business in a totally different way forever.

When you take your first step into the shop make sure you inquire about the different service packages that N'Style offers. For starters, every experience begins with a vigorous shampoo followed by conditioning to hydrate and nourish the hair and scalp. As the conditioner sits, a hot, stress freeing towel is applied. It loosens and lifts residue from the facial pores; moreover, this rejuvenates and enhances the face after a long, hard day at the office. Sounds too good to be true?

N'Style Hair Grooming honors appointments. Because they feel that all of their clients' time is valuable, every client is encouraged to schedule an appointment. They understand time is of the essence, and they understand the need to get in and get out with nothing less than a great cut. Appointments are the best way for this to happen. The shop's entire staff gives special incentives to encourage setting the client's next appointment before they leave the shop.

The environment. The experience. The atmosphere. These are the things that distinguishes N'Style from other barbershops in the area. Not just considered a barbershop, N'Style takes initiative to be recognized as a dynamic, grooming lounge. Keeping close tabs on assuring quality service for their customers. Unlike most barbershops, N'Style maintains a professional business dress code. They take pride in their work; furthermore, they take the time necessary to educate each and every client about how to manage their own personal hair care needs in between visits.

N'Style Hair Grooming Beauty & Barber is bringing back something that we've all been missing for a long time, the real love and joy of barbering and top-notch barbering at its best. This is their way of giving back to the community, by imparting knowledge and sharing the benefits of maintaining healthy hair and skin. It's not about competition, it's really about providing the best experience possible to those who truly desires it.

N'Style is located in the Vista Garden Marketplace Shopping center in Bowie, MD. Your invited to come enjoy the holiday season with The N'Style family.
